Jackie in Towers-Anthony in Frats-Rick and Mark wherever you are! How are you all? Hope you have a Merry Christmas!-D

Now, we take our time so nonchalant, Cocktails at 2 so bon vivant. We dress our days in borrowed clothes, Lowell never calls, the NoDoz always goes. It might be time to change our ways, but I've loved these days. We've drowned our doubts in dry champagne, soothed our souls with fine c---e; I don't know why I even care, the four of us will go so WIRED, and get nowhere. Now, as we indulge in things refined, we hide our hearts from harder times...A taste of Schnapps, a chair for ten, Oh we can only go far, by bringing the kids to Shady Glen ...Now, before we end (and then begin)--Let's drink ANOTHER toast to how its been. A few more labs to be complete, A few more will ask, "Don't you guys ever sleep?" Someday, we'll have to change our ways, But I've loved these days...Here's to more memories, Love always, Carol.

To X, I just wanted to say I like the way things are going and if I ever act as if I'm not interested that's because I'm not. Only kidding. From Guess Who. P.S. I hope you've cleared up over the harlot stuff.

Roomies 2 & 3 Fun's over! Vacation! For 5 weeks you'll have to find new places to sleep! I'll miss you both. Happy New Year!!! Roomie 1

RANE--To the best roommate and friend--it's been a great (but sick) semester. It's "Pink Panther" next semester. I'm going to miss you--a lot! Don't forget the "Twilight Zone" is always open for you! Good Luck on exams! Love, C-lyn (P.S. How's Boring?)

Laura, Our first Christmas together is almost here. Merry Christmas! I'm looking forward to spending the holidays with you. I Love you, Daryl

"Firstie" (O.C.)--W.P. again? (or maybe the "cows" can come up here--they're a little different than our "cows"!! Thanks for a GREAT semester! Here's to next semester! "The Yearling"

Beth B.: Congrats on the job! I knew you'd get it! I'm gonna miss ya abunch next year... and you hugs! Love ya, Sandy

SHUUUUUU!!!! Everyone will miss you!!! Take Care of yourself and stay low!!!LOVE YA SHELAGH AND TRACEY

Carol and Tracy: Good luck on finals and have a great break. See ya'll next semester. John

PACE Magazine

There is immense improvement in the second draft! The first stanza is clearer now. In the original first stanza it is implied that the smell of beer soaked. This is hard to imagine. The more poetic phrase, "smell...seeped...clammy", is more sensual and less awkward. However whether a smell can actually seep something clammy is up to the poet to decide. The use of the phrase "this place" is rather general, yet this may be purposeful. It seems to convey that something unpleasant from last night can pervade even the next morning. This unpleasantness continues in the next stanza.

Logical progression and change exist in the third stanza. This is a strength not found in the original draft. The subject is hungry, not perhaps, only for food, but for something to redeem the day. Despite the ill-appearance of the apple he finds it both sweet and tart. There appears to be a general mingling of good and bad in this stanza.

The final stanza indicates that it might be only the subject's perceptions of the world around him which determine whether "this place" is good or bad. The more poetic style indicates change in the subject's mood and view of his world.

The second draft is much improved! There is clear transition between stanzas which enhance the logical progression of experiences leading to a vivid change in the subject.

— Jennifer

First draft:

This place is
the smell of beer
from last night
soaked in the rug.

It feels like the
hard lecture hall seats
and cement walls.

Today I found
apples on an apple tree.
They were worm-eaten
and twisted
and sweet and tart.

I can taste one now.

Rewritten:

This place is
the smell of beer
seeped last night
clammy into the rug.

I walk to class
collar up.
In hard lecture hall seats
and cold cement walls.
I can't even sleep.

I walk to my next class
hungry and find apples
on a tree
worm-eaten
and twisted
and sweet and tart.

I can taste now (in this hall)
fall
appleciderandmasks
The Danse Macabre
crunchyleaves that smelled so good.

Time is beginning its contractions, experiencing labor pains for the birth of 1984. Will you be ready when the water breaks?

What does the birth of new year mean to you? Do you find yourself disposing of an old corpse self December 31st?

For some of you, celebrating December break involves contemplating Christ. Others still await a Messiah. Still others are polytheistic or atheistic. What is more central to our lives than a philosophy or religion to explain and instruct? Who are the ideal man and woman, what are the "good" ways to act socially? Then, what is evil?

After finals, go home and answer the big questions. Submit illustrations of your answers in prose, poetry, artwork, and photography.

Thank you.

— Mike

Submissions of prose, poetry, artwork and photos will be accepted from December through early February for the February issue. Leave your submissions in the Pace mailbox at the Connecticut Daily Campus or mail them to PACE, c/o Michael Fiorello, Hilltop Box 796.

● Writers: mail us your semester's final project in Creative Writing! Short stories, long stories, portfolios of poetry, creative essays, writing hints (how to inspire writing, clarify theme, master dialogue or overcome writer's block) and suggestions are welcome.

● Artists and Photographers: PACE needs you, too! Art must be in black ink; photographs must be black and white. Photo essays, inspirational photos and drawings, as well as illustrative graphics and photos will be accepted.

Also, critiques and suggestions on the artistic layout of PACE are welcome. Comments or questions? Call 487-9315.

Thank you all for contributing to PACE, and have a wonderful holiday!

Picture the Arts

To the Editor:

The arts are with us throughout the year. Between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day they seem more pervasive than at any other time, with Christmas music, reproductions of Renaissance paintings and performances of A Christmas Carol and the Nutcracker Ballet almost everywhere. We could hardly imagine ourselves without the arts, especially now. They excite and calm, provoke thought and provide escape, increase understanding and appreciation of ourselves, others and our universe.

To all students in the School of Fine Arts: I wish you great succes with Elizabethan Christmas Dinners, Nadja, Amahl, Dickens, final projects, exams, chamber concerts and the hundred other things on which you're working. To all students in the University: I invite you to get into the holiday spirit by joining us at our performances and exhibition.

Sincere best wishes to all for peace now and in the new year.

Jerome M. Birdman, Dean
School of Fine Arts

Invest in your life

To the Editor:

Season's Greetings and a Happy New Year!

It's more likely to be a happy new year than at any time in the recent past. Many fields have never had a job problem, even in the depths of the recession that is now receding, but quite a few did. There are clear indications that the situation is easing, and that students don't need to be quite so anxious. A solid liberal arts education is an investment for life, and we know from what our graduates have told us that they have reason to be grateful for their experience here. Not everything has to pay off right away, and the relevance of some of the things we make you do can only be seen in a proper perspective after a few years. Make the most of your time here—it's worth the effort. My very best to you all.

Julius A Elias, Dean
School of Liberal Arts

To the Editor:

When I came to The Universtiy of Connecticut sixteen years ago after working for a private college I dearly love, and had graduated from, I was hesitant to embrace a commitment to an institution that seemed at the time doubtful about itself. Happily that's changed. UConn may not be number one except in women's sports and men's soccer, but it's moving with the best now and taking every opportunity to let that be known. From the choicest of windows on the UConn world, 26 wide panes of glass and a job that touches all aspects of academic and administrative effort, I've seen the doubts vanish and the pride grow. Through my windows I see hundreds of students go by each week; and they certainly look like they're happy to be here. A dozen years ago I wouldn't have said that. I see many more faculty and students walking past in earnest conversation. I listen in the Library, in the lobbies at Jorgensen, on the pathways crowded when classes break in the mornings, in the bleachers at the basketball games, and I like what I hear. I've long since gained that commitment to place and purpose, and I sense it in so many faculty and adminstrators that it's beginning to seem more the norm than the exception. Sure there are problems and frustrations. Money's tight, and the state system is sometimes impossible. But when the stuff of the institution, the faculty and the students and the staff, believes in the specialness of the common enterprise, then greatness is no only possible, it's only a matter of time.

Join in love, peace

To the Editor:

In this marvelous season in which we celebrate two of our most important religious holidays, it seems appropriate that we focus attention on the basic precepts on which the Judeo-Christian culture is based-love and peace. Those two words are among the most beautiful in our language and, if practiced in their full meaning, could lead to the elimination of hatred, prejudice, and war. In our current tense international circumstance, our only hope of salvation is that all peoples rededicate themselves to their fulfillment. The holiday season provides us an opportunity to do so, along with enjoying the many material benefits that accompany the season.

I wish you all the happiest of holiday seasons and, most especially a world filled with love and peace.

John A. DiBiaggio

Practicing our ideals

To the Editor:

One of the most meaningful periods in anyone's life is when they are giving or receiving material things, ideas, or even best wishes. We are entering those seasons and it is with great pleasure and a feeling of togetherness that I and the members of my staff wish you a pleasant and enjoyable holiday season.

1984 is going to be a year when the needs of students will be better met because of the kind of cooperation we will experience as a result of each student finding ways to unitlize the resources of The University of Connecticut to their best advantage to meet their individual needs.

Have a happy holiday season and we look forward to your return in 1984.

H. Fred Simons
Assistant Vice President Student Affairs and Activities

Take care of yourself

To the Editor:

I would like to express Best Wishes for a merry Christmas and a Happy New Year from all the Personnel of the Public Safety Division to the Universtiy Community, especially the student body.

Your welfare, safety and confidence in us is our greatest concern. Our goal is to continue to maintain open lines of communication to your problems and conerns.

Once again, have a safe and happy holiday season.

Joseph Ciccalone Director Public Safety Division

Food for thought at Christmas

To the Editor:

What a pleasant surprise when you called to ask if I would write out some thoughts about the Department of Student Commissaries, the students at UConn and our relationship!!

The student management teams, that direct the individual kitchens in the small dormitories, deserve all the recognition and support that this community can give them. Very often, an entire school year can go by with the members of dormitory receiving the benefits of their labors, not realizing what the Stewards do. This is ideal of course, because that is the mark of a successful manager in any service industry.

On numerous occasions, our Stewards and Assistant Stewards are faced with the daily problems of the business world. Such issues as employees rights, labor laws, insurance coverage, wage increases, board fee changes, learning to deal with one's peers-are just a few of the components that must be addressed throughout the school year.

My observation is that these student leaders more often than not rise to the occasion and benefit immeasurably from the experience.

The DSC is truly a student oriented food service system that provides a unique opportunity for students who want to take advantage of it.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Gerald Weller and the entire DSC staff

We help save memories, too

To the Editor:

The staff at the Office of Public Information is involved with the students here on a very personal basis. Our office has the usual complement of student workers and hosts several interns each semester in the areas of communications, English and journalism.

If you are on the dean's list for your school or school or college, we will let your hometown newspaper know about it. If you are involved in a student production in the department of dramatic arts, we will let them know that, too. Just about every outstanding student accomplishment is sent to local hometown newspapers, so that your friends and neighbors can know about it and it affords UConn a mention as well.

This is only a small part of our work here, but it is the part that is of the most interest to you. Many positive stories involving the University that you read in Connecticut newspapers are written by our staff and interns. We also are called upon by reporters very often for information regarding all UConn stories. Perhaps you have heard UConn people on the radio. Chances are, our office has prepared that material for the station or, at the very least, put them in touch with the UConn "expert."

Our staff also answers hundreds of general questions every month about the University, questions from both students and the general public.

By the way, when you graduate, we will let your hometown paper know about it.

We are always willing to help you or your UConn organization in any way we can.

We wish all of you a very happy holiday season, an enjoyable semester break and a productive spring semester.

Walter S. McGowan Jr., Director
Barbara Barrett

Office of Public Information

The credit is yours

To the Editor:

I would like to express my appreciation for the student body's active participation in the activities offered by our Department during the past semester. Their enthusiasm was boundless and contributed greatly to the success of the programs.

With best wishes for a happy holiday season.

Barry M. Wilson, Director Student Activities and Union Programs

Thinking of you

To the Editor:

The holiday season is an appropriate time to reflect on pleasant experiences of the past, the present, and on those yet to come.

We are happy that we had the opportunity to be involved in the students' admission to The University of Connecticut. Admission allowed you to continue with your education, and the fact that we were instrumental in this process is especially pleasing.

Our conern for your success as a University of Connecticut student did not end with the mailing of your admission letter. We provide a variety of services to assist you in your educational pursuits, and are pleased that we may still be a part of you academic life.

Future applicants from all parts of the country will ask us questions about our student body. It will give us much pleasure to tell them of you academic and personal achievements and to talk about the high standards you have set for others to follow.

We wish you much joy during this happy and very pleasant time of year.

Poems from the Blue-Haired Boy

Translated by John Hurbon

#121 Once Twice Once

We off upon the black
As she proclaims her intercourse
With the green soldiers on both sides
And I hesitate to grasp my course
Amidst the world in which I contemplate
Shallow minded ponies run and prance
Their manes growing long and tangled
Who shall ride their thoughts
When I'm gone?
Varnish the old furniture with nostalgia
Caring for the senile who unlike ourselves
Appreciate the ordinary and menial
Bushes tower above the dead cat
Discarded for lack of life and frisk
Who shall inherit her yarn and Tales of mice and birds and babies?
Would you kiss me for a while?
Breathe a thought that you have Kept hidden for a maybe while
Shadows crept upon by age
Move slower now then when so young
Vowing us take notice
Pass by slower
Rescue me from my loneliness
Let me tell my sage to you, friend
Never end our bliss embrace
Love, like never mind, and owner
Of another's hollow heart
What worth hath an emptily
Spent life take on anyhow?
Or lover love anything to take to a material worth
All spent for some unkind a reason.
She rides in hopes of some to Follow and appreciate, in so much as a dream, however.
Cry for the wicked and the sordid Trim the guilt and bear the Contraceptive conscience, continue Inasmuchas I write on through
A hand and a friend's eye
Practice a repertoire all of my meaning and thoughts
Who shall understand?
Take a lot of what the day shines
Down upon the palaces and kings of different gardens
Grow me servants and fingers of trust
From no more than faith seeds
Treasure, but don't rely upon words, only words
They speak but don't act, and acting
As another state shall stand on its own
And I will learn to love
Someday, I guess
I will find the time to find out
What to find out about
And if I don't, I shall quickly die
As I quickly live
And write as I never thought I could think of you
Once twice once.

#86 Grandma's Chair

(this poem is for my mother and hers)

In the corner of the livingroom of my heart
Grandma's chair still rocks
A faded sweater rests over an arm
And a scarf and a pair of socks
Hum the lullaby of songs she used to whisper and sing in my ears
They paint the memory of her softness down the side of my face in tears
We love you Grandma
We knit your life into our dreams and fears
We love you Mom
As you have baked your children from the recipe of care
We are tucked into heaven by your fingers
clasped together in prayer
To be rocked by God
Into the yarn of eternity
Upon Grandma's chair

#60 The Camera's I

We stop and pose for keeps
A flash
A blink
The memory and the portrait of life
Who's forgotten the negatives, positives, truth?
Not the camera
You gave me your picture
The way you wanted me to see it
We developed our pictures
The way we wanted to see it
But I lost them-you know how I am
You kept the pictures that I lost
We found out he had no film in his camera
But we got the picture.

"I can see better without my eyebrows."

by Daniel Davison

He shaves his eyebrows, buys his clothes for a dollar a bag from the thrift shop, and lets the hair dressing students experiment on his blond head with styles that never quite become vogue. After 21 years of life, he is collage of the non-sequitur, a human assemblage which finds itself searching for the college experience.

An earring in his left lobe shines from under the brim of a Panama hat--and he wears wool socks over muscular calves, which are socketed through hour glass knees into defined thighs, there joining a stout torso with meaty arms--and his feet are overstuffed into a pair of Chinese slippers.

He leans back in a chair with his feet up on the desk, and he howls out the words to psalm 16--For You Are My God--and strums along on his six-string. His hat, a souvenir from a Provincetown road trip, is cocked down over his eyes, and when he looks up for the next chord, the brim is pushed aside by his denuded brow.

"I enjoy stepping out of line," big William ("Bill") Francis Salisbury says, and he accents it with a loud quick strum on his guitar, which he muffles with a slap just as suddenly. "I enjoy being different. If I feel constrained, I don't feel healthy. I don't have any responsibilities right now, and I'm free to do things which are crazy and different. I don't even have a job."

But he does. He is resident assistant for 34 University of Connecticut students, and must balance friendship with authority among peers. His job is ensuring that no one's good time is destructive, or imposes on another student.

He does this mostly by example. "Rarely do I tell someone what to do," Bill says. "I'm secure in my own life, and the guys see that, and respect me for it. I enjoy myself in my own way, and I don't push it on anyone. I don't ask anything of the guys which I don't do myself."

But Bill hasn't always had a grip on himself. "In high school (back home in Glastonbury) I was a transient burnout," he said. "I spent most of my time partying and riding my motorcycle. High school was a wasteland for me--I was really unproductive--it was a bad time."

It took a lot to get Bill turned around from what he was to what he is. The first incident to unsettle Napoleon came a few days after he graduated from high school. "...I skidded out on my motorcycle at a busy intersection near home," Bill said. "It was around lunch time, and tons of people saw it happen. The bike fell on top of me, and the weight of it kept me skidding for what seemed like forever. I can remember looking up from the ground as I was bodysurfing over the pavement, and everyone's head turned, and they all focused on me. Then I stopped skidding, and suddenly, they all turned back to what they had been doing."

"I was dripping with blood, and I got up and pulled my motorcycle off the road. Nobody helped me, it seemed like no one noticed I was bloody, like there was a spell over them. It was too weird," He strummed slowly in accompaniment. "The bike was pretty well bent up, but I got it started and rode home, shaking and crying, all bloody, all shaken up. I fixed myself up in the bathroom, then locked myself in my room and pounced on the bed, and cried uncontrollably."

Bill's older brother Phillip, who is a born-again Christian, heard him bawling. "He asked me why I was crying, and I thought about it," Bill said. It wasn't because I was hurting from the accident. It was because nobody cared--nobody lifted a finger--nobody did a thing to help me. I felt really alone.

"My brother said I should pray to God, I should tell him about it," Bill said. "So I did, and the next day I felt better about myself, like I had made a change for the better."

Then at the invitation of a friend, Bill spent a week at Camp Burhea, a camp of Christian fellowship in Southern New Hampshire. "...They all knew I was coming, and they all knew my name. I was like, 'hey, why are you all being nice to me? You don't even know me.' They taught me about the Bible and Christianity, because I never really knew about it, and I strengthened the commitment I had made after my accident," Bill said.

Other encounters have also given him perspective on himself. He learned about his dislikes at New Hampshire College where he spent his first semester. "The place is disgusting. Everyone is rich, and I hated it there," Bill said. "At first I went to college only because my parents had always told me I would. And I had been working in restaurants since I was 14, so I thought I'd learn to manage one, and New Hampshire College is a business school."

Bill has learned a few things on the road as well, and he recounts hitchhiking adventures of road between home and New Hampshire.

"...Once I got a ride with a truck driver who had a wife on each coast. He lived a real grubby lifestyle, in a trailer, when he wasn't driving. And he was wasted--pounding beers--he said he couldn't drive if he wasn't drunk. So he was flying, and it starts snowing--he's doing about 80 mph, and we're 10 feet up in the cab of his tractor trailer.

"Then he heads for the off ramp because he wants more beer, and the snow was deep by then. We turn down the ramp doing about 45 mph, and he slams on his air brakes. The whole back of thr truck starts sliding sideways and he says 'don't worry, this happens all the time...we'll probably make it...well, maybe not.' What he meant was, we might slide right through the intersection, and I was holding onto anything I could for dear life. We stopped a little bit through the light, and he says, 'pretty good, huh?' Then he pulled over and bought some more beer and kept driving."

Some months later, the driver of a '70 Ford station wagon, with bad shocks and peeling bumper stickers, wasn't drinking. But had he been, a grain of sanity at least, might have been preserved in the alcohol. "...He was big and ugly, with a stubbly grey beard, and he was telling me that the cops were chasing him, 'yeah, they're after me,' he says. He was looking out his window up at the sky, 'They've got choppers after me.'"

"He was driving fast," Bill said. "About 75, and he was telling me how he was after a man who was courting his little daughter. '...and I'll kill him! I'll blow him to bits if I ever see him again. I think I shot him once, but it might have been an animal I hit.' He wasn't sure because it was in the deep woods of New Hampshire near where he said he lived...but he didn't seem dangerous to me."

Even if Bill has had his share of close encounters, he's also met up with some good people. In the summer before his sophomore year, Bill and a friend--Suzanne Combs--took a bicycle tour from Glastonbury to Cape Cod and Martha's Vineyard.

"...At the end of the first day, me and Suzanne--who was a really crazy, spontaneous and fun person, and I am too relatively--were in Sommersett, Mass. We stopped to camp in the only patch of woods we could find. It turned out to be a hangout where kids went to get drunk. We're like, 'yeah, we'll get mugged.' But it was dark and we were too tired to ride even another mile. Then we were setting up camp, and we heard some voices on the other side of a hill. We peaked over the edge, and there were four people fishing, so we decided to go down there and see what was going on.

There was one big girl and four little guys. It seemed like she was the alpha queen and they were the beta dummies--she was definitely in command--she was older too. She had graduated high school and was living on her own in an apartment. Her name was Sabra Mellon--wild name--and we told her what we were about, and she says 'don't camp here. Come stay with me.'"

"Suzanne and I were like, yippie, indoors, comfortable bed, nice breakfast in the morning...she lived in a big old Victorian house out in a neighborhood where the houses are far apart, and she had the whole upstairs to herself," Bill said.

"Sabra brought out some Ben Gay for Suzanne's sore muscles. Then we loafed around all night getting to know this girl. We gorged ourselves on a home-cooked Italian dinner, then she brought out trays of cheese and crackers. She just stuffed us, and made us feel like kings. We lounged out on the couch, just loafed around on the shag carpet--it was so comfortable--just what you want after a long day's ride. We got to take showers, and be all clean and fresh after being all sweaty.

"Sabra gave her bed to Suzanne," Bill said. "She gave me the couch, and she slept on the floor. We were just so overwhelmed by her hospitality. The next morning she cooked us breakfast: eggs, bacon, toast, everything."

Bill has tried to get in touch with Sabra, and has stopped by the house in Sommersett, but she has moved out, and Bill has not been able to contact her. Occasionally he is in touch with Suzanne, who graduated from Eastern Connecticut State College two years ago.

"It's hard to keep in touch with old friends. It's so easy to drift apart, only because that's most convenient," he says with a lilt in his voice--now back in his room, now wearing a black beret with a tiny tassel--and Bill says it's a good afternoon for steamy pekoe tea and some talk.

He puts up the feet--thump--Frankenstein-sized hiking boots have replaced the Chinese slippers, and the chamois shirt has come mail order through L.L. Bean. He has run out of tea, so offers a screwdriver, but then remembers he has no vodka, and he is drinking ginger ale anyway. "I hope you weren't looking forward to something warm," he huffs through his nose clearing it of carbonation.

"It's important to have something to look forward to," he centers his fizzing glass on a coaster, carefully. "...When I was real young, probably sixth grade, I had a mini-bike, and I used to ride to the bowling alley every week. I was in a league there, and it was something I looked forward to--not the bowling, but snaking through town to get there. It was totally illegal. I would find all the shortcuts, the trails, I'd cut through people's back yards and get chased by their dogs. It got my mind off whatever was bothering me, off my sixth grade responsibilities. It was something fun and different."

I would find all the shortcuts, the trails, I'd cut through people's back yards and get chased by their dogs. It got my mind off whatever was bothering me, off my sixth grade responsibilities. It was something fun and different."

Then in high school, drugs were fun and different--marijuana, alcohol--"I always knew I wouldn't be like that forever, I knew it was something that would pass," Bill said. Even then I knew that some day I'd want a family and a career, someday, but then I wanted freedom. Smoking pot and drinking was fun and irresponsible, and I liked it."

And looking back, "It wasn't a total waste," Bill said. "In a way, I'm glad I did it because I got it out of the way, then instead of now."

After drugs, Bill found stimulation in a Christian way of life, a lifestyle explained in part in an anonymous newspaper clipping taped to his door; "You can't make the Bible conform to your lifestyle, you have to take your lifestyle and make it conform to the word of God."

The phone rings (an angel is born every time a bell tolls, so they say), and Bill plucks the receiver off the hook, places it on the desk and plays the blues on his guitar for whomever is on the other end. Before the second refrain, he snatches up the receiver and in a breath, "Good evening, hello there, what's happening," but the caller had hung up, and B.F. Salisbury shrugs it off with a modified refrain; "Oh, you can hang up, you can hang up, yeah, you can't talk to me..." Soon he quits playing, and wipes the guitar carefully before packing it into the case.

"I'm not always going to be able to live this way," Bill says. "And I don't have any gripes about going into a job and conforming. It's just playing the game."

Then he turns toward the window, a peep hole on the first nasty storm of November. He plays a few quiet, forlorn chords on the guitar, finally letting a one hang in the air and then die away. Yep, things are moving toward winter, his face reads as he turns back and wrinkles a defoliated brow. "For now I can live the way I want, so I figure why not. I'll never be able to do that again in my life," Bill says.

Sunflowers

by Linda Morris

The teacher handed each of us kindergarteners
A packet of sunflower seeds
To grow over summer vacation,
There would be a sunflower contest
The first week of first grade.

I watched my Aunt Alice
Plant her sunflowers
A month before
In the patch
By the barn.

I planted my seeds
In front of my Aunt's sunflowers.
I patted the ground on top
Of them, then watered
My tiny seeds.

Over the summer I fertilized
My sunflowers and pulled up
The weeds
That dared
To grow.

By August my Aunt's sunflowers
Burst open in bright yellow.
My plants were Spindly,
Short,
Tightly budded.

September came. The new teacher
Told us to Bring in our Sunflowers
For the contest.

My Aunt's perfect,
Round sunflowers
Towered over mine.
One of my sunflowers was Crooked at the neck

So the flower faced
Directly to the ground.
Another had uneven seeds and looked
More like a crater-covered moon
Than a prize winner.

Even my biggest sunflower was Puny compared to my Aunt's
Tall, perfect sunflowers.
I didn't bring my Sunflowers to the contest.

Next afternoon I shuffled into
The Auditorium to see the sunflower Contest. There were Ten sunflowers on stage.
Mine were better than any of them.

But each got a blue ribbon:
One for Smallest Flower,
One for Biggest Flower,
One for Funniest Looking
One for Best Looking
One for Tallest,
One for Shortest,
One for Most Rounded
One for Most Weird Shape,
One for Most Straight Stem,
One for Most Crooked Neck.

Back at the garden
My sunflowers
Grew in the Shadow of perfection.

Our Family

Poems By Jennifer Thilo

It's her birthday.
Dad sips his scotch
when we sing
Happy Birthday.
I sing extra loud.
It isn't to drown out
his drunken singing
'cause he isn't singing
He's probably not even drunk.

I hear the soft moans
of a child.
She used to cry easliy,
during Lassie,
and when she lost
a balloon...
I bought her a new one,
I knew she liked
happy endings.
I was jealous of her once.
Everyone loved her.
Mom's arms never left her,
but strangers reached out too.
I was the cold one.
I could never melt and smile
but her eyes perpetually sparkled
even when she cried.
I told her once that
No one
loved her.
We all just felt sorry for her.
She cried then too.
She knows better
now, I guess...
but, I still hear the moans
from her bedroom.
Mom's not home tonight.
So tonight she's in the arms of a stranger.

A grouchy August day,
when we moved into this home.
It rained and so much heavy stuff to carry
and the furniture looked different between the new walls.
We ate Honey Combs for dinner
and I lay in my bed
listening to the house sounds
in the dark.
Then I saw the tip of your cigarette glowing.
-wanna go for a walk?
-Daddy should I get changed?
-no just pull on a robe
we talked in secret night voices
We walked in the mist
exploring the newness
with my bare feet
and our noses.
And then we sat on the porch
You threw the cigarette
into the silvery wet grass.
We watched it for a long long time
before it went out.

The shadow fell
today
and hit the leftover
babyfat
on your chin.
I was surprised
the way your hair
baby fine
fell back
and your pinkskinned cheekbones
shone in the light.
Your hard tiny breasts
pressed against me when we hugged
hello again.

I punched her in the face.
I was surprised
at how easily
she fell.
You said
"Good Work"
Mom frowned.
I knew
it was worth it
when you
picked me up
from school.

I almost hugged
her stiff shoulders;
She was crying about her math test.
But she's independent for her age.
We have the blue eyes
and drink our coffee black,
But, she's the
New Woman of
Today.
Her back is stiff.
She's gonna
go Somewhere.
So I didn't hug her;
My Mom's a winner.

Auto Exotica

By Joseph P. Gillotti III

Curved lines over hard rubber
Carrying, where the driver wants to go

Graceful silouette, very low
In fire red berlinetta

A screaming motor
Driving star wheels
Under a glassy expense

Speed and beauty
Fragile money
Fantasy scenes
In modern paint

There's a speedy, wet and foggy track
On the black road, a glowing yellow line
Disappearing under the sloping hood.

Why Doesn't She Love Me

by Joseph P. Gillotti III

The sky is clear, deep blue
The sun brilliant
Your breath is icy
The air is cold.

Thr frozen pond is glass and snow
The black disc your goal, unreal
You see the girl, golden hair and mittens
You try harder, crashing along

The puck sticks on your stick, maneuver
Faking, skating, driving, trying to score
Trying to impress you sweat
Breathe, pant, kill yourself, push harder

You yell and scream and encourage Exhorting your team but saying: 'Look at me.'
On a rush you're gliding to a collision
A last effort, a shot, a crash.

You taste the ice and it's down your shirt
It cools the sweat and brings relief
Untangling, the sharp pain splits your kneecaps
You ask: 'Why doesn't she love me?'

Statustatistics

By Josephine M. Cannella

I think I did the job well.
I had no choice; I was dressed for the part,
luckily for him.

He ran gallantly by in his Jordache sweats
and his Etonics
with his generic friends
struggling, gasping behind.

He called my name across the street,
Casually, and acknowledged me with his Ear-to-ear pearly whites
(Gee, was that a sparkle?).
Out of habit I smiled and waved back.

Then I saw the two friends look at me,
And I saw him look at them
(you know that look,
the one the quarterback gives the water-boy
after another great play).

And suddenly,
I was another pretty girl he knows,
Another blessed with his acquaintance.
I could almost hear their awed wondering
At the NUMBER of women he knows.

At first I laughed at him,
Then at them,
And when I'd finished laughing
At myself,
I let go of my smile.

I'm sure it fell
On the ground
On top of one his damned footprints.

The Complex By Josephine M. Cannella

Cinderella thinks someone should Come put out that Awkward torch she carries.
(We're not supposed to believe in her anymore.)

Cinderella thinks someone should Come let her work
Beneath some of his light.
(We're not allowed to believe in her anymore.)

Ashes to ashes
Cindy to cinders
Again- it's midnight.
She secretly wishes she were Snow White.

Cinderella, Cinderella, put that torch out Yourself.
Can't you see you're
Standing in the fire?

Echoes From a Hollow Heart

Leave me alone!
"Quite a change for you, isn't it?"
They keep haunting me.
I'm not the same person. Damn it.
Not the same person
You sipped all the life from
And left an empty glass
On your dusty shelf.
Tell them to let go.
They tug at me like mad dogs
Tearing my corpse every which way.
Someone else knows how to Caress my body now.
But, I must confess,
I am waiting for the foam to ooze
Out of his beautiful mouth.

What?

You changed your mind?
No,
I don't think so.
I think
They ripped your mind
Right out of your head.
And
They didn't have to Tug so hard.
It snapped out
Like a mess of Rubber bands
Spurting your face dark red.
And then they stomped on your mind
Until the cement sucked it up.
Then, my dear,
They gave you a new mind.
Changed your mind?
No, I don't think so.

The Recurring Nightmare

Maine Vacation

When I arrived
I brought mass confusion.
Numb. Everything was numb.
My legs wouldn't work.
My tongue wouldn't pronounce English.
Something scraped the insides of my stomach.
Not knowing what to do
They put me to sleep.

The Moment

The needle slowly lowered to its launching.
My strapped arm tensed stiff with stress.
The nurse's knobbly knuckles promised agony.
Her preoccupied eyes peered professionally at me.
I desperately searched her masked face
For some compassion, reassurance Anything human.
I felt cold fingers pressing my flesh.
The syringe motioned closer
I shuddered.
Dad, why did they demand you wait outside?

Room 320

The room is white and Quiet now.
The nurses left
And the extra beds
Are empty.
I clutch Freckles, my stuffed dog
Now soaked with my tears of fright.
Out the window,
Out in the sprawling parking lot,
Mom and Dad
Are driving off.
Leaving me for more needles
And tests.

7 Years Later

I tried to talk to you
But my mind was one foggy nightmare.
The man in white kept clamping his strong fingers
Around my wrist.
And stabbing my mind with questions.
You placed my arm around your shoulders
But it fell off. I couldn't keep it there.
It had torn through to my insides again
And wouldn't leave.
The white man didn't understand.
He strapped me up and took me away from you.
When I awoke
I was once again alone
Curled up in another false womb.

Love Song

by Bill Gunn

She lies across his lap
her perfectly rounded body
on his thighs.
He holds in one hand her slender, rounded neck—
the other rests lightly on her middle.
He is her support—
she, his strength.
She beckons to him,
dares him to explore her heart strings.
He cannot help but obey her subtle commands.
He runs experienced and nimble
fingers up and down her neck—
slowly at first and then faster,
as her sweet moan and cry
rise and fall by his touch.
Splashes of colour and sound fill them both until their music's
climax comes,
each giving its soul to it,
maintaining it,
and then calming,
ringing in echoes across the room—

The Lullaby

Sugar candy coated child,
made by me
(and daddy too, of course).
The sugar's gonna wear away,
and leave you ordinary, some day.
Just another
like your mother.

The Lady

The Lady
in an ice tower,
cold walls all around
so high above the ground.
Outside, she can see them
dancing, singing,
being happy,
the people she knows.
She wants to dance too,
but ice floors are brittle, and easily broken.
Every move makes another crack.
Yes, ice floors are brittle,
but not ice doors.
She is alone.
Who has the key?
Or is the door unlocked?
Look and see
she begs.
Her breath fogs the ice.
No one can see,
no one can hear,
and she cries frozen splinters,
her reflection in them
shatters as they fall to the floor and the ice cracks
once more.

Love and the Lake

Cold, gray water,
stirred now and then
by a stray breeze,
or the frenzied mating
of a pair of ducks.
I stop to watch, squatting on a rock
slick with droppings.
She's so bold, the female,
darting before him,
with neck outstretched,
and wings thrashing wildly.
He mounts her roughly,
plucking her feathers,
making a bloody spot on her neck.
She cries out and struggles,
as if in pain.
When it is over,
she swims away to seduce another.
I see them coming
along the muddy bank.
A man and a woman,
entwined in each other's faces.
Her eyes sparkle, she lifts her chin and laughs.
Her hands move wildly,
as she tells him her best story.
They walk slowly by,
the mud sucking at their feet.
He grabs her roughly to him,
his hand to the nape of her neck,
and kisses her.
Love is beautiful
and I shiver with the cold.

Greenpeace

moonlight lays a path across the sea
the water kisses its lover beach
lazily caressing the day-warmed sand reaching foamy fingers as if to lure an unsuspecting wanderer

silently the ocean people rise moonlight burnishes their gleaming sides their sad eyes wrinkle in seeming mirth together their lovely voices rise in a plaintive lament of song and sighs

they cry for their people, cruelly slain
by men who will not understand their song ends on a long, low note
now they turn toward the land
leap up on the glittering sand

they protest the killing the senseless, murderous spilling of innocent blood in crystal water
do they die in vain?
or will we stop the slaughter?

Melissa (Allen House, Yea!) You wild girl..This past semester has been far more than "normal" with us Glastonbury girls rooming together. All those wild parties and dancing (no we weren't drunk) are becoming a habit. Thank God!... and all those "assessments"?! Thanks for being such a great roomie and putting up with me for the past semester (I'll try to keep Jonathan out of your waters!) Have a Merry Christmas and a great vacation. Love, Cheryl Mush: I hope your Christmas Holiday (and New Year too) is white, happy and as fun as Thanksgiving was for you (heh-heh)! It's fun being roomies. Love, the other feline fanatic.

Diane in French: It's been great working with you this semester! What would I ever do without you and the M.J. tapes? Have a wonderful Christmas and I'll see you in the New Year. Love, C.K.

Hey Sandy, Laurie, Sue, Jeff, Jack, Bob and Lorretta: Hartford again?? Let me know—IJF

Debbie D. Merry Christmas, Happy New Year and Happy B-Day. A.M.L. Joe P.

Kappa Sigma Pledges: Isn't it about time you became more than just a bunch of poor, blind students?

Denise, I was so surprised by your call. I forgot to ask how to get in touch. Can't have that coffee if you don't call back. P.E.R.

Margie HAPPY BIRTHDAY! To a super roommate and best friend, I hope this year brings you the best you deserve it! Jumpy

BROCK SIXTH FLOOR PENTHOUSE: Have a Merry Christmas and a great break! You're the best floor on campus and I love you all! Carolyn

Happy Holidays Wheat! Thanks for making my semester terrific. Since you've been so good to me this semester (picking me up at work, making me dinner, putting up with my grumpy moods etc.). Santa will make sure you're taken care of-(and so will I!) Let's make our fifth Christmas together the best one yet! All my love, Leslie

Dana, Tree and Kimmie-Best of Buddies. Just wanted to let you know Nothing could ever break up the fearsome fivesome. We love ya! C.J.

MERRY CHRISTMAS MARYBETH!! Only two more weeks! Enjoy your vacation, I know it will be difficult without me! Good luck on your finals! Love, M.

Steve- Just want to say I'm gonna miss you! Have a very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year! Love ya, Me

For all my Fenwick neighbors especially 2nd: MERRY CHRISTMAS!! 20 days 'til freedom. Get psyched for Rudolf tomorrow night!TTFN

Faith, Good luck next semester in Hartford! I'm really gonna miss you and all our late night antics! Come visit me and maybe we can go to Boston finally! Heidi

O'Connell--This is the last personal you'll receive from the Daily Campus connection. I'll miss you next semester. We've had fun at the APT. Hope to see you during break. Love, Sharon

Mark and Janine: Good Luck!!! MB will miss you guys!! Get ready for your last set of finals. Ilene

"LANZARELLI" Here's the personal I promised. Good luck on finals. Hope you have a Merry Christmas. Sharon P.S. thanks for being such a good friend this semester. I'll miss you and I know you'll miss me too.

Sue HAVE A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND DON'T MISS ME TOO MUCH LOVE, Judy

To Ingrid and Dave, my two roomies, and Janet, a fellow "Invisible Rider": MERRY CHRISTMAS! I love you all, Skunk, Songo, Sonny, Whatever. P.S. Janet can I do a backbend?!

Roxy--Play team asteroids lately. Next time you go to a nasty bar, don't be throwing water at PR ladies--But you can crack my beer. Have a good break. Chuck

Al (Brock 3rd floor) Hope you have a VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS! Love your Secret Santa.

Yes, Pfizer hires Christmas Trees! Merry Christmas to my own evergreen, and good luck in establishing your new roots!

Mr. John: Thanks for being the greatest advisor ever, even if you are soft on sports. Love, Campers.

PAM you're the best, good times, Hartford, even, Kentucky, Where the hell is memphis, marker fights, Wendy's, acupuncture, the shakes, Merry Christmas Pam and John.

Hey A/W STAFF! WE MADE IT THROUGH. THANKS FOR A WONDERFUL SEMESTER. YOUR SPIRIT, SUPPORT AND SENSE OF HUMOR ARE GREATLY APPRECIATED. YOU'RE SUPER!--NJA

SBC--REMEMBER WHEN: we first went running; that long afternoon; slow dancing; reasons; your 22nd and my 20th birthdays; our first road race in the rain; our trips to Boston, New York, and the Beach; Gum on the wall; falling asleep; Dunkin' Munchkins; the last SIG EP banquet; being there for each other... I'll never forget any of them. Best of luck in all of your future endeavors. Forever DMO.

Hey Hitchcock--Don't get fresh on Santa's lap this year!!

Maureen, Alsop--I've been waiting for this moment to send you a green one to let everyone know how HORNY you are.--Your worried roomie.

To Sue M. in French B I just wanted to wish you a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Good Luck to you in the real world, I know you will succeed in whatever you do. Thanks for being such a terrific roommate and such a special friend. I Love Ya! The Vom Monster

Suzy: Merry Xmas--You look like an adult!!! Impressive IJF

A week of pink Bermuda beaches and warm Bermuda sun. Are you tough enough to take it?

Bermuda College Weeks
March 3 to 31 and April 14 to 21

One of our previous college visitors described this event as "a week of wretched excess." An exaggeration perhaps, but not altogether inaccurate.

Your week begins with a Sunday night Get Acquainted bash at one of our hotels, clubs or discos—meeting old friends, making new ones. The next morning, the tough part begins.

Spending day after sun-drenched day on soft, pink beaches. Swimming, tanning, body-gazing. Imbibing our special libations. Enjoying free beach buffet lunches, free calypso and steel band waterside concerts, even a free cruise—all courtesy of the Bermuda Department of Tourism.

What will you do with your free time? What won't you do! Bermuda is famed for its snorkeling and sailing, tennis and golf. For its fine restaurants, discos and British pubs. And for its fabulous mopeds—everybody's favourite way to tour the island.

Think you can handle a week of this? Talk to your campus friends, and see your Campus Travel Representative or your Travel Agent for complete details.

For more information, including a Bermuda College Weeks brochure, contact your Campus Travel Representative or your Travel Agent.

Couldn't you use a little Bermuda this spring?
